

Dear Valued Supplier-

This morning TRIUMPH announced the completion of its acquisition by leading investment firms Warburg Pincus and Berkshire Partners and my appointment as Chief Executive Officer, succeeding Dan Crowley. The transaction represents a change in ownership; however, TRIUMPH will continue to be a standalone operating company. As such, there are no changes to existing contractual commitments, performance requirements or key contacts at Triumph.

It is an exciting time for TRIUMPH, and I am grateful to serve as the CEO. Prior to joining TRIUMPH, I enjoyed a 26-year career with TransDigm Group, a global designer, producer and supplier of highly engineered components for commercial aerospace and military customers. In October 2023, I retired as Chief Operating Officer, responsible for enterprise-wide operational management, business strategy, commercial development and P&L performance. In this role, I provided leadership and oversight of all quality, engineering, operations, sales and marketing and financial activities across 48 autonomous operating units spanning roughly 105 global manufacturing locations.

The new private ownership structure strengthens our company's finances, enabling a longer-term perspective evaluating and implementing investments to meet our customers' needs and for our future growth. Our improved financial condition positions us well to improve our relationships and dynamics with our supply base. Our leaders look forward to engaging with you directly to identify opportunities where we can work together in reducing costs.

Thank you for your continued support and partnership.
